THE Council has agreed an updated licensing policy, which aims to balance the needs of residents and those enjoying Hackney's nightlife.

The policy was developed by the Council's Licensing Committee, following consultation with residents, businesses and visitors to the borough and extensive evidence gathering over a number of years.

It sets out the basic hours that a business can expect to get a licence for, however they may be able to open later and each application will be considered on its own merit. It also expands the Shoreditch Special Policy Area. Existing businesses will not be affected.

Cllr Emma Plouviez, Licensing Committee Chair, said: "Hackney has a fantastic nightlife. Our bars, clubs, restaurants and theatres are known across London and the world, and as a Council we are proud to champion the businesses that make such a contribution to our borough.

"However, as it has grown, it is becoming more and more difficult to manage and strike a balance between supporting our late night venues and the needs of residents who live among them. As a Council we want to do both.

Maintaining the balance

The updated licensing policy follows consultation with residents, businesses and visitors to the borough

"We need to find a way to support our nightlife but we owe it to our residents to make sure their concerns are represented"

"We're a small borough, with high density housing, and that brings about tensions that are hard to manage without guidelines in place to help licensees and residents alike.

"We initially consulted on an updated policy a couple of years ago, but decided to go back to the drawing board and, in preparing this policy, we did a huge amount of listening, research and evidence gathering.

"In future, the onus will be on new applicants to demonstrate that they are responsible, understand the pressures on the area and that, by opening later, their business will not have a negative impact on the area. We will help and support them to do that.

"We need to find a way to support our nightlife to thrive, but we owe it to our residents to make sure their concerns are represented too."

Spread the word: apply for community grants

APPLICATIONS for 'Hackney's A Place for Everyone' main grant programme are now open.

Voluntary and community groups are invited to apply for funding from £5,000 up to £30,000 for initiatives that will be delivered for one year.

The initiatives should promote social inclusion, encourage independence and develop personal resilience, and build positive relationships between different groups and communities.

Organisations can also make a second application for holiday play schemes, which deliver high-quality initiatives for children and young people during the school holidays.

Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety, Policy, and the Voluntary Sector, said: "The work that the voluntary and community sector delivers through their grants helps provide for projects such as employment advice, safety improvements and health advice for our residents.

"This year's programme has so far supported 83 organisations. Spread the word and let us help you thrive, taking your ideas and assisting to make them happen."

The deadline to apply for a community grant is 12noon on 19 September.

Kingsland Market reopens

Kingsland Market is set to reopen on 28 July as a destination for antiques and pre-loved items; pictured: the market in the past

A BARGAIN bookshelf, arty antiques and retro records are just some of the amazing finds people could get their hands on when Kingsland Market reopens this month.

The market is set to re-launch on 28 July and will be open every Saturday, from 9am to 5pm.

It originally opened in 1880 as a 'waste' market for people to trade their unwanted goods, and was once the place to go in Hackney for spare parts, second-hand goods and odds and ends. However, trading dwindled to only one store in 2015.

In keeping with 138 years

“It's great to see the market back on its feet. It's going to be like old times, with lots on offer for customers” of tradition, the relaunched market is set to once again be home to antiques, vintage clothing, pre-loved items as well as having the traditional 'waste' traders.

Harry West, head of the Kingsland Market Traders Association and trader at the market for the past 43 years, said: "It's taken a lot of hard work but it's great to see the market back on its feet. It's going to be like old times, with lots on offer for customers. So come along, have a root around and grab yourself a bargain."

Harry was the last remaining trader on Kingsland Market and has worked with the local businesses and the Council to re-launch the market.

He runs his stall with his daughter and grandson, offering wares from house clearances including things he has up-cycled and repaired himself, giving new life to objects that would have been thrown away.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet member for Markets, said: "Putting the relaunched Kingsland Market back on the map has been a long held ambition of local businesses, celebrating the traditional and mixing it with the new."

There will be live music from singer-songwriter Alice Mee-Bishop at the relaunch, as well as a free tote bag giveaway.

News in brief

Crackdown on illegal tobacco

THE fight against illegal tobacco will hit Hackney's streets on 27 July as the London-wide illegal tobacco roadshow comes to the Narrow Way.

Illegal tobacco is untaxed, unregulated and easier for children to start smoking. Residents can find out more about illegal tobacco and why it's a problem at the roadshow, which takes place from 10am to 5pm.

Find out more at: www.hackney.gov.uk/illegal-tobacco

Unregistered schools update

THE Council has called on the Government to strengthen legislation to ensure all young people in unregistered schools are safe, in response to a scrutiny commission report published in January.

Hackney's Children and Young People Scrutiny Commission concluded a year-long investigation into unregistered educational settings. The investigation heard that across the country, up to 6,000 children attend as many as 290 unregistered educational settings.

In Hackney, around 29 unregistered yeshivas offer religious teaching to approximately 1,000 to 1,500 boys within the Charedi Orthodox Jewish community.

Key concerns detailed in the Commission's report highlighted an apparent lack of safeguarding procedures, the narrow educational focus of yeshivas, and a lack of interaction with education and safeguarding professionals. The Council's full response, which was discussed on 18 July, addresses the Commission's recommendations. Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "We want the Charedi community to prosper in Hackney, however we need to continue to have frank discussions about the importance of a rounded education and, most crucially, how we can ensure children in these settings are kept safe."

"This Cabinet report sets out a clear strategy for engaging with unregistered educational settings however, our efforts continue to be hampered by the fact that current legislation is completely inadequate to address concerns about the quality of education and safeguarding in unregistered – and thus unregulated – settings."

Council thanks its foster carers in annual celebration

IT may have been Friday the 13th but that didn't stop the borough's foster carers and staff celebrating at their annual party at the Hackney Marshes Centre.

This year The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Clare Potter, joined the celebrations and took great interest in meeting foster carers, as well as presenting awards to those celebrating their years of service.

Prize bingo, a raffle and a quiz got people mingling and despite the momentary downpour of rain, spirits were not dampened and everyone took to the floor to dance the night away.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, who attended the event, said: "It's wonderful to see both foster and connected carers – and their support networks and staff – come together at events like this to celebrate their work.

"The support and dedication they provide for children is invaluable and we truly appreciate it."

STEEL pans, Samba, African drumming, colourful costumes and a huge carnival puppet delighted crowds at the first ever Hackney Kids' Carnival on 15 July, which saw children from four local primary schools parading around Dalston Square.

Over 160 pupils took part in carnival workshops in the past two months leading up to the event, learning a range of carnival skills – including how to plan a dance routine and how to make headdresses, as well as learning to sing African folk songs and play drums.

As well as performances from the young carnival artists there were free activities on offer including a 'fruit pizza'-making session with Cafe Route, crafting with Donna Fugassa Cafe and a chance to get carnival-inspired temporary glitter tattoos.

Tione Chance, 14, from Dalston, said: "All of the festivities have been great. It's good to see all the young children being able to express themselves and show people what they are capable of."

Schools were judged by carnival experts including the youngest Hackney Carnival judge to date, 13-year-old Kayjan Maytil, and received awards in a number of categories:

- Year 4 pupils from Colvestone Primary school, E8, who worked with Dimensions Entertainment, picked up the award for Best Dance
- The award for Best Cultural Representation was won by Year 6 students from Hoxton Garden School, N1, for their performance with Blema Dancers
- Randal Cremer Primary School, E2, Year 6 pupils, who worked with Pan Vibrations, picked up an award for Best Music, while other Year 6 pupils from the school were awarded Best Carnival Designs for their entry into the parade with Tropical Isles

- And Year 5 children from Southwold Primary School, E5, won Most Environmentally Friendly entry for their costumes and performance with Taru Arts.

The awards were presented by the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, Deputy Speaker, Cllr Kam Adams, and Cllr Chris Kennedy, Cabinet Member for Families, Early Years and Play.

Cllr Adams said: "Hackney Kids' Carnival was fantastic, there was a real buzz in the air. It was really great to see all the hard work and effort the young people had put into their performances."

Jo Riley, Headteacher at Randal Cremer Primary School, added: "This project has been amazing. It's what Hackney and Randal Cremer is all about,

Hackney came third overall in this year's London Youth Games

HACKNEY had an incredibly successful year at the London Youth Games, retaining the Para-Games trophy, and finishing third overall for the first time in 40 years.

The borough accrued 10 team medals and 70 individual event medallists across 11 sports. In addition to the team and individual success, Hackney also won the Inner London Trophy for being the highest placed inner London borough.

Para-Games Team Leader, said: “It's been great! It's really good for the kids to be playing against people of similar abilities, and they've done really well – this is the second year running that they've won the overall trophy. That's amazing.

“We've been participating in para-sports for a long time now in Hackney, I think the more opportunities there are the better. At the moment I've got two athletes who are going through registration for international events in athletics.”

This year's Games saw a big success in rowing, claiming both the trophies for on water rowing and indoor rowing for the second year. Hackney also retained the cycling and boys' judo trophies.

Some of the standout achievements at the Games came from Jude Costley (sailing and swimming) and Thomas Archer (swimming and aquathon) winning medals across two sports. Vawn Humphries and Maddie Childs also retained their kayak slalom and sailing golds.

Out and proud

Hackney went to Pride in London with 120 people representing its diverse community

DANCING drag queens and kings joined Council staff and local community groups to show there truly is a rainbow around Hackney, with a spectacular show at this year's Pride in London parade.

Hackney was out and proud at the event for the fourth year running, with 120 people representing the borough, including the Mayor of Hackney and an amazing range of borough-based organisations.

The parade was held in central London on 7 July, with Hackney folk joining 30,000 other marchers supporting equality for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex (LGBTQI+) communities in the UK and across the globe.

More than 20 performers from The Glory pub, in Haggerston, provided a colourful show atop the Council's Hackney Pride 365 float, alongside dancing and chanting from the rest of the contingent.

This included representatives from St Joseph's Hospice; Homerton hospital; Project Indigo youth group; Fringe! Film Fest; Rainbow Grow gardening club; The Outside Project homeless shelter; Hackney's QTIPOC (queer, trans and intersex people of colour) group, and arts organisations Hackney Showroom, Culture Device and Drag Syndrome.

The Hackney parade entry received a fantastic reception from the one million spectators.

John Sizzle, co-owner of The Glory, said: "It was so fantastic to see the joy on the crowd's faces as they joined in with big sing-alongs to Wham, Whitney and Madonna! Despite counter-productive (anti-trans) protests holding back the start of the parade, The Glory along with their Council pals refused to let anything except love rain on their parade."

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, added:

"Bringing Hackney to Pride with one of the most inclusive and diverse contingents, we amplified the message that our borough marches in solidarity, passionately challenging all forms of hate such as transphobia and homophobia, while celebrating and standing with the LGBTQI+ community."

The theme of this year's parade was looking at what Pride means to the people of London, and the borough's contingent paid tribute to the diversity of Hackney's LGBTQI+ community, with representatives from a very wide range of organisations and backgrounds.

"We closed the parade with a bang. The heat was on and we were all on fire! Thanks to the Council for the support and the platform, the artists really had a wonderful experience and they are all still buzzing."
Daniel Vais, Culture Device & Drag Syndrome

The marchers wore 'I Love Hackney' rainbow heart T-shirts, a powerful symbol of the borough's commitment to LGBTQI+ equality and a celebration of diversity.

Dr Ronx Ikharria, who works as an emergency doctor in Hackney, said: "Pride is about thanking those before me, like Marsha P Johnson [one of the leaders of the Stonewall riots] who paved the foundations for my freedom to exist as a black queer person. In return I aim to set a visible, positive example to other LGBTQI+ people by taking part in events like this."

Otto Baxter, a performer with Drag Syndrome, added: "Pride was amazing, electrifying and it was really cool hanging out with other drag queens." The Council launched Hackney Pride 365, a year-round, community-led festival that celebrates the borough's historic, diverse and boundary-breaking LGBTQI+ community, last year. The Hackney parade entry was organised as part of this festival.

'It's all about having amazing people around you'

Pub landlord, festival promoter and entrepreneur Rob Star talks about doing a job he loves – and how he got there

By Harriet Worsley

WHEN I was about 14, I had a job digging up Christmas trees. One of the men I was working with asked me what I wanted to do when I grew up. I said I didn't really know and he said 'just make sure you do something you really love'. That really stuck with me. And I've basically just tried to follow his advice."

Pub landlord, festival promoter and entrepreneur Rob Star knows how to have a good time (at the time of going to press he'd recently come back from Russia to see England play in the World Cup) but he is certainly not shy of hard work either.

Rob says: "Today, I have five pubs [all with 'star' in their name], a street food market, festivals... It's not all been plain sailing, there have been lots of ups and downs. But when you love what you're doing, the downs don't feel so bad."

Rob got into the industry accidentally: his parents always threw house parties, and he remembered loving staying up late, dancing to music.

He recalls: "When I was 16, I started putting on parties for my mates. I'd hire out hotels or clubs and tell them it was for sixth formers, not us kids."

Rob moved to London to study psychology at Goldsmiths College, but, he says: "I already knew I was never going to be a psychologist. Someone told me that the first year was mostly going over the stuff I'd learnt for A-level, so I'd have lots of time for parties."

"I found myself constantly travelling to East London to put on parties because it had a really creative atmosphere. There were record and fashion labels popping up, things happening. So I moved in 2002 and I've stayed ever since.

“There have been lots of ups and downs. But when you love what you're doing, the downs don't feel so bad”

"I live by the canal in Hackney Wick. From my balcony I can see about 28 cranes. The area is still evolving, I just hope that the businesses that made it what it is are able to stay on too..."

Rob had been putting on warehouse parties in Hackney for a while – most notably the 'mulletover' raves – when he decided to buy a nightclub.

He says: "I found one, the sale fell through and a partner pulled out. So suddenly I found I didn't have enough money. Instead, I bought a pub."

"I had a big contacts book by then, so I knew I could get people to come. But it was a huge learning curve."

I'd never even pulled a pint before. I had to get the guy who delivered the beer to show me how to change a barrel.

"At first, I was managing it, doing the accounts, the building work, the marketing... And living above it too. Pretty soon, I realised I wasn't very good at doing all of those things."

"It's all about having amazing people around you, is what I learnt. Now, I've got a team doing the pubs, a team doing the festivals... I just oversee them, making sure everyone's happy and pop in for drinks in all these nice venues. It's the only way I could possibly run a business like this."

Now the pubs – including The Star by Hackney Downs – are doing well, Rob is trying to focus on doing things for the communities they are in.

He says: "Five or six years ago, we started running a free Christmas dinner for the elderly in Bethnal Green – a nice lunch, some entertainment, a few drinks... We do it in Hackney now too, and encourage all our managers to do that sort of thing."

And what about Rob's plans for the future? Does he ever tire of partying? Rob laughs: "The strange thing is, the more you get involved in parties professionally, the less you seem to actually go out."

"I look at the audiences now, and they're all about half my age. But it's cool, I still really love what I do. I'd like to have another five pubs eventually! So yeah, no urge to slow down... Not yet."

Transform spaces

PEOPLE are being encouraged to come forward with ideas for new mini-parks as part of a trial to reclaim the borough's roads from cars.

The mini-parks – also known as parklets – will replace individual parking bays on streets and transform the spaces for community use.

Applications for the trial open on 25 July with a roadshow on Broadway Market, where people will be able to get a flavour of the scheme and get inspired to host their own.

Residents' ideas for parklets could include planters, benches, games, notice boards or anything else they can think of, with successful applicants able to access grants of up to £150 to help with the cost of setting them up.

“The parklets scheme will help reclaim our streets from the car”

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “Only 35 per cent of households in Hackney own a car – the parklets scheme will help reclaim our streets from the car and open up spaces to the whole community.”

“The Mayor of London’s Healthy Streets for London plan emphasises the need to create better public spaces where people can meet.

“By encouraging local people to join forces and host their own parklets, they will not only be able to make their street a better place, but work with their neighbours in the process.

“I can’t wait to see the ideas we get, and look forward to visiting the finished parklets.”

The trial scheme will support 15 parklets, which will be in place from one to six months. The most successful parklets may then be able to apply to become permanent. Applications close on 26 August.

News in brief

When it comes to producing energy, it's match point...

DID you know that a lorry load of food waste produces enough energy to show Wimbledon on big event screens around London, five times over?

Or that just three lorry loads could generate enough energy to provide all 350,000 cups of tea served at the tennis tournament?

That's only if it goes into the proper food waste caddy, of course. Which is why Recycle for London is promoting eco activities across Hackney this summer, to make it easier for everyone to recycle properly.

Ali Moore, Campaign Manager at Recycle for London, said: “With a weekly food waste collection provided by the Council, recycling food waste in Hackney could not be easier. By taking the simple step of putting food scraps in your kitchen caddy, you can use that waste to help power a fun summer.”

Hackney-based environmental education charity, ecoACTIVE is holding 15 food waste sessions in primary schools and children's centres until the end of September, with the aim of reaching 500 pupils.

The sessions will focus on the importance of recycling food waste, teaching children what happens to food that isn't recycled through fun activities including ‘meet the worms’, and a food waste sorting game.

Food recycling pledges will be handed out to the young people at the end of the session.

Get ready for summer of cycling with expert advice

CYCLING is your ticket to summer; that's the message from the Council as it highlights a series of free pit stops, free cycle lessons and month-long bike loans to get people on their bikes.

The Council's mobile mechanics will be visiting events around the borough, providing free bike checks and helping residents get their bike summer-ready.

They will be at Shoreditch Park at 1-4pm on 28 July; Stonebridge Gardens at 4-7pm on 8 August; Mabley Green at 1-4pm on 18 August; and at the Hidden River Festival on the New River Path at Woodberry Down on 15 September.

Free one-to-one and group cycling lessons, aimed at beginners and people who want to top up their cycling skills, are also available. People can choose a time and date that suits them or join scheduled cycle skills group training.

Residents can also join the Council's ‘try a bike’ scheme, where they can borrow a bike, lights, panniers, helmet and lock for a month for just £10.

The scheme is aimed at residents who want to see if they like cycling before committing to buy a bike.

After the month is over, the scheme will help residents find a cheap and decent bike to buy.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “Summer is the perfect time to start cycling with our free pit stops and cycle lessons, as well as our fantastic ‘try a bike’ offer.”

Part of the Community

Until 1 Oct, Dalston CLR James Library, Dalston Square, E8 3BQ

KEEPING the streets clean, tending the borough's parks and helping children with their reading are just some of the jobs Hackney Council staff do everyday to support their communities.

A free photography exhibition puts 16 staff members in the spotlight, highlighting their role as public servants and asking them what they like about working in Hackney.

The photographer behind the project, Andy Donohoe, has lived in Hackney for five years.

The idea for the exhibition came when he was cycling around Hackney for a photography project and wanted to learn more about the people who looked after the parks and streets everyday.

He said: "These photographs show the people who work tirelessly to keep Hackney running smoothly. Street cleaners, librarians, service centre staff, the whole spectrum of Hackney Council is represented here."

THE annual Hackney Schools' Music and Dance Festival was a roaring success, with 4,500 children taking part across 56 Hackney schools.

The 10 day music festival took place from 26 June to 5 July at the Round Chapel, in Lower Clapton. It was the single biggest schools' musical event in the borough and a great platform to showcase the music and dance talents of Hackney's schoolchildren.

Thirteen performances took place overall, with a mixture of mass sing-a-longs and instrumental shows.

Guest performers Avant Garde Dance Company treated the children to contemporary dance pieces, and joined in celebrating the dances created by children from participating schools.

Louise Gent, teacher at Benthall Primary School,

“I've been bringing children to the festival for years; it's amazing and we wouldn't miss it for the world”

said: “I've been bringing children to the festival for years; it's amazing and we wouldn't miss it for the world.”

The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Clare Potter, said: “It's fantastic to celebrate the musical successes and achievements of our young people. It was great seeing children putting in a lot of effort and really shining in their performances.

“Hopefully this event sparks interest in other young people in music and the arts.”

News in brief

Ofsted praise for Simon Marks

SIMON Marks Jewish Primary School has been singled out for praise by Ofsted Chief Inspector Amanda Spielman. In a speech to the Policy Exchange think tank discussing the teaching of British values this month, Amanda offered the school as an exemplar, quoting the school's Ofsted report: “No opportunity is missed to discuss and learn about key values, including the fundamental British values of tolerance, respect, democracy and the rule of law.” The one form entry primary school, in Stoke Newington, received its latest Ofsted inspection in June last year, gaining an overall rating of ‘Good’. Headteacher Gulcan Metin said: “The school is really proud to be recognised in this way by the head of Ofsted. We see it as acknowledgement of all the hard work put in by staff and pupils.”

Pupils thrive in world of work

FROM cooking to wedding planning, students from one Hackney school have had a busy year in the world of work. Ickburgh School, E9, is a special educational needs school for children and young people aged three to 19 years old. This year, 10 students took part in specially designed work experience placements. Ranging in length from two days to 10 weeks, the placements were designed to support the students' interests and skills.

Assistant headteacher Joe Sieber said: “Work experience is an invaluable opportunity to give our students a real taste of the world of work. It provides a wide range of possibilities to challenge and develop the students, including their travel, communication and social skills.”

Some of the students have been working with Make Kit, a local social enterprise that creates healthy recipe kits for families around Hackney. Others have been creating wedding decorations for Medina Events, a nationwide event planning company.

Equal Voices wins award

A HACKNEY project that turns migrant and refugee women into vocal campaigners has won its second national award of the year.

Equal Voices, a programme run by the education charity ELATT, was celebrated at the Learning and Work Institute's Festival of Learning, earning the ‘President's Award’ for their exceptional achievement in adult learning. Equal Voices is aimed at newly arrived migrant and refugee women. Through a programme of workshops, citizenship sessions, English classes and community volunteering, it aims to teach women the skills needed to become community leaders.

Stephen Evans, Chief Executive of the Learning and Work Institute, said: “This project is an outstanding example of the role adult learning can play in empowering people to participate in society and bring about real change in their communities.”

Carnival collective

Hackney-based theatre companies Access All Areas and Hackney Shed are looking for young people with learning difficulties and disabilities

HACKNEY Carnival has a long tradition of showcasing the borough's wide variety of creative talent. This year, two theatre companies are determined to shine a light on young people with learning difficulties.

Named 'the Hackney Carnival Collective' the project is the brainchild of Access All Areas and Hackney Shed.

From July to September, the two Hackney-based theatre companies will be working with 16 to 25 year olds who have learning difficulties, disabilities or autism, and who want to learn about music, movement and costume.

Vicki Hambley, Artistic Director of Hackney Shed, said: "This exciting project allows young people with learning difficulties and autism to come together in a safe space to be creative and build friendships. Hackney Carnival is the perfect way to celebrate the culmination of the work they have created over the summer."

The project is split into two parts, and participants can choose either to take part in one or both. The first – run by Hackney Shed – takes place in July, while the second – run by Access All Areas – will happen in

“ This exciting project allows young people with learning difficulties and autism to come together in a safe space ”

Hackney rowers go for gold

A TEAM of four Hackney 16 year olds from Lea Rowing Club, rowing for Great Britain in an eight-persons boat, beat France at the annual GB v France competition. The Hackney rowers, who took part in the race in Paris on 12 July, were Ella Sharman, Rosa Millard, Molly Foxell and Laura Ellington (pictured below).

Rosa, who has been rowing at the club since she was six years old, said: "It's been a totally amazing journey. It seems like one day we were rowing at the London Youth Games and the next we are rowing for GB."

The girls' coach, Paul Carter, who was winner of Coach of the Year at this year's Hackney Sports Awards, added: "It's a great result for the Lea girls who have trained extremely hard to get selected. The new facilities that Hackney have helped developed for the kids are really starting to pay dividends." For more info on the Lea Rowing Club, visit: learc.org.uk

Capoeira gold for 8 year old

AN eight-year-old from Hackney has earned a gold medal in Capoeira in the ninth European Open Capoeira Muzenza Championship in Poland.

Thomas John Clifton (pictured) earned first place in the under-8s category on 2 June, impressing teachers from around the world with his martial arts skills.

Capoeira is an afro-Brazilian martial art form which combines a range of attacks and escapes using all parts of the body that are disguised with acrobatic movements.

Apollo Music Projects stages Beethoven to young audience at Hackney Empire

CLASSICAL concerts are notorious for attracting older audiences. But at performances of Beethoven's Symphony No.6 at Hackney Empire this month, the average age hovered at around nine.

On 3 July, Hackney-based music education charity Apollo Music

Projects welcomed children, teachers and parents to two concerts performed by its orchestra.

Apollo Music Projects brings live classical music to children who might not otherwise experience it. In the past 14 years, nearly 10,000 children have experienced interactive workshops in classrooms and performances in concert halls.

The special concert at Hackney Empire was organised to celebrate the end of this academic year, in which the project has worked with 23 primary schools and special schools from across north and east London, including 14 from Hackney. It was conducted by David Chernaik, CEO of Apollo Music Projects, and included explanations along the way.

David said: "It was wonderful to see so many children completely absorbed in Beethoven's music in this amazing venue. The level of concentration from the children was remarkable."

One young member of the audience added: "You can just relax and listen. It sounded amazing – there was so much detail."

Here's to good health

A birthday cake celebrating 70 years since the creation of the National Health Service was presented to NHS staff

THE City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) joined the Council and Homerton hospital to celebrate the 70th birthday of the National Health Service (NHS) and to appreciate the vital role the service plays in the lives of its residents and to thank NHS staff.

The CCG used its Twitter account on 5 July to highlight its health and care services, celebrate the work of NHS staff and field questions from residents.

A number of videos were also produced for residents, including one where local doctors Laurence Blumberg and Nisha Patel discussed their experiences.

Dr Patel said: "It's an amazing job being a GP, it's such a privileged place to be able to look into people's lives and to be part of that – you don't get that in many other jobs."

Other events to celebrate the occasion were also highlighted, including the presentation of an impressive birthday cake for NHS staff at Homerton.

It has also been 70 years since adult social care was created, through the 1948

“It's an amazing job being a GP, it's such a privileged place to be”

National Assistance Act.

Simon Cole, head of the hospital social work team (integrated discharge service), reflected on the changes he has seen during his career. He said: "There has always been a joint working relationship [between health and social care] but over time both have started to work more closely together.

"In Hackney I think we are ahead of the curve, being at the forefront of an integrated health and social care system."

Trust is rated as 'outstanding'

THE NHS trust that provides mental health and community health services in Hackney has been judged outstanding yet again. Inspectors from the Care Quality Commission (CQC) visited the East London NHS Foundation Trust (ELFT) in March and April. Last month, the CQC published its findings, reconfirming ELFT's 'outstanding' rating.

Dr Navina Evans, Chief Executive of ELFT, said: "Recognition from the CQC is pleasing, but remains part of that improvement process and not an end." The CQC praised the trust's ethos of involving patients and carers in treatments, and its commitment to 'learning, innovation and continuous improvement'. ### Talking about health services

EFFORTS to bring health and care services closer together were showcased at a recent 'Let's Talk' event hosted by City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG), the Council and the City of London Corporation. Residents got the opportunity to air their views on services, in the first of a series of events, on 26 June. CCG staff were on-hand to talk about 'integrated commissioning', an approach that will see staff from health and local authorities working closer together to join up services. Integrated commissioning has four key areas: prevention of illness and promoting good health; planned care, including cancer and outpatients; unplanned and emergency care; and children, young people and maternity. Mental health is a priority across all areas.

Attendees also learnt more about plans for health and social care services working closer together, ensuring that people experience a better quality of care.

The next 'Let's Talk' event will take place in the autumn.

Crisis Services offer pathway to mental health support

CITY and Hackney Crisis Services has expanded its 'crisis pathway' mental health provision to support people in crisis or distress.

The pathway includes a 24-hour Crisis Helpline (020 8432 8020) for people of any age who may have long-term psychological issues or who have had a sudden crisis such as a bereavement or relationship issue. It offers confidential expert advice and guidance support and referrals to local services if needed.

The crisis service is available 24 hours a day, at weekends, bank holidays and outside office hours.

The walk-in Crisis Cafe (07393 762 366; email: elft.crisiscafe2@nhs.net) at The Raybould Centre, E9, offers a supportive and therapeutic place for anyone struggling with life. It is open 6-9pm weekdays and 12noon-4pm weekends.

The Service User Network (07508 842 688; email: elft.sun@nhs.net) supports people who experience emotional and psychological distress, frequent mood changes, self-harm and/or have thoughts of suicide.

It also helps people who support others with mental health issues.

The East London NHS Foundation Trust and City of London Police have teamed up to provide the Mental Health Street Triage Service. An occupational therapist and social worker accompany police officers to incidents where there is an immediate threat to life – someone threatening to self-harm, or commit suicide – or where somebody has contacted the emergency services and expressed concern for an individual. There is also an Intervention Hub in The City of London providing support to people who are homeless including mental health, drug and alcohol assessments.

Wedding wows

IT'S wedding season so Hackney Archives staff are taking a look back at some of the thousands of photographs of nuptials in the RA Gibson collection.

Weddings were a key part of Ron Gibson's business. There are hundreds of sets taken on the familiar steps of Hackney Town Hall as well as those taken at churches and synagogues across East London

Although the archives has the studio's workbooks, which record surnames and addresses, for photographs taken between 1955 and 1972, there are no records for photographs taken after summer 1972.

Archives staff would love to hear from anyone who had their wedding photos taken by Gibson's between 1952 and 1978.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

Have your say on granting gambling premises licences

THE Council is looking for feedback from residents on the factors it takes into account when it receives applications for new gambling licenses.

These factors include crime and disorder, security at the premises, the protection of children and vulnerable people, the location of the premises and their hours of operation.

Since 2007, the number of licensed gambling premises, which includes betting shops and gaming centres, has decreased from 72 to 55 in Hackney.

Residents can have their say at: consultation. hackney.gov.uk/licensing/gambling-statement-of-principles-consultation

The consultation closes on 14 September.
